We understand that much bad debt has been accumulated by banks, other financial institutions and commercial companies over the last ten years. A large proportion of that bad debt is to be attributed to Pakistani nationals, who have fled Pakistan after (allegedly fraudulently) receiving large credits from the banks and other financial institutions. These credits add up to hundreds of millions of dollars. The thrust of the cooperative investigation by this company and concerned client is to locate and identify the stolen moneys, which have been transferred or hidden in Pakistan, out side Pakistan mainly to the U.K., Western Europe and North America. Expert advice will be provided through the good offices of CRI, to the creditors in order that, legally, they can freeze stolen assets followed by attachment and recovery.

Banks and other financial institutions have been the main sufferers from the alleged fraudulent obtaining of credits, there may well be commercial organizations and individuals who have been the victims of fraud. These latter may have legitimate claims, which are acceptable to courts in the relevant jurisdictions, and may therefore wish to recover that which is rightfully theirs.
