The Soma Center offers a unique 'techy' feel and creative environment in a stylish building a few minutes south of San Francisco's Market Street corridor. The city's economy has increasingly been tied to that of Silicon Valley and hi-tech companies – both large and small – have city offices. That's partly because San Francisco is a hotspot for entrepreneurs and start-ups with at least three quarters of the city's businesses employing 10 people or less. The finance and tourism industries are vital to San Francisco, but it's also building a reputation for biotechnology, particularly in nearby Mission Bay. The city is a national destination for conventions and conferences and the Moscone Center is across the street from the Soma Center. Baseball's San Francisco Giants are nearby, as well as all amenities and top attractions like Fisherman's Wharf.
