Frank Liz's Summary

He is a futurist, a passionate entrepreneur, and author of "Saving a Planet At Risk. How climate change and shortages could end civilization...and what we can do to save the world". Frank Liz provides practical proven combat climate change and food shortages, and calls forth a unique hero, ecoagriculture, to help save the world's two mega-forces. www.savingaplanetatrisk.com

Frank Liz was born into extreme poverty. One of three children, his life changed forever when, at the age of 11, he came home from school one day to find his mother weeping, because she had no food for her children. The next day he started his first business—selling oranges and bananas in his neighborhood—which generated enough money to feed his family. Just one year later, little Frank's business had changed completely.

He went to college graduated and created a conglomerate of successful businesses, everything from supermarket investments and consumer debt relief. Frank Liz became a millionaire many times over, but his life was also full of failure more than from making millions. When his eldest son died in 2002, Frank Liz's life and priorities changed once again.

Searching for understanding and purpose, he devoted himself fully to identifying trends and business cycles that would affect others. Among his predictions:

- When oil was just $20 a barrel, he forecast that it would reach $100 a barrel. People laughed. They aren't laughing now.
- He forecast the collapse of the U.S. real estate market . . . in 2006 when everyone thought the bubble would never burst.

Specialties

Now, Frank Liz is expanding his predictions beyond businesses and financial cycles to share critical information about the tools you need to not merely survive but thrive in the substantial changes in human society, water, energy, and food that he forecasts occurring in the next 10 to 20 years.

First and foremost, Frank Liz is an optimistic futurist. He believes in human beings, in science and technology. Together, he says, they will create a future worth living.
