Additional Complaint Information

In August 2015, BBB received several communications from complainants stating that they were required to sign a release form indicating "...no complaint has been filed with any federal state or regulatory or enforcement agency or any Better Business Bureau regarding anything related to this Release. If the undersigned has done so, payment is contingent upon withdrawal of the complaint and written notification that any such complaint has been withdrawn..."

Consumers should be aware that BBB generally does not allow for a consumer to 'withdraw' a complaint that meets BBB complaint acceptance policy. Instead, the case will be closed out in a manner that reflects that the concerns have been resolved.

In March 2015, BBB contacted the business regarding a pattern of complaints filed with our organization. At the time, the business representatives indicated that the business was in the process of transitioning their ownership and attributed the pattern of complaints to these changes in the company.

Over the course of the next few months, however, the pattern of complaints continued and the overall number of complaints filed increased. In September 2015, BBB contacted the business and requested a response to the pattern of complaints.

Specifically, BBB consumer complaints allege:

- *Poor customer service
- *Failure to provide contracted services
- *Confusion about the services provided by the business (consumers believe the business will attempt to settle debts and/or issue payments to creditors)
- *Consumer's financial situation deteriorated due to failure of the business to perform contracted services
- *Deceptive advertising

To date, the business has been unresponsive to this request.
