(I-Newswire) September 4, 2010 - Clearwater FL – Innovative Wealth Builders has carefully watched as various bank reforms were put into place. As an advocate for consumers utilizing credit, Innovative Wealth Builders cautioned clients to closely read the notices being sent from credit-card lenders. As feared, many cardholders have been notified that interest rates will be dramatically raised by some of the nation's largest credit issuers. Innovative Wealth Builders warns that even consumers who have consistently paid on time may be impacted if their credit score has fallen for reasons other than payment history. Innovative Wealth Builders has a simple message for credit card holders who find themselves in this position; don't tolerate it.

Major banks such as Bank Of America and Chase have notified cardholders over the last year that interest rates will jump and in some instances these rates have risen as high as 28%. Most banks have provided no explanation. Innovative Wealth Builders has been told that even when consumers call the bank's toll free numbers and ask for an explanation, none has been given. Widespread speculation is that cardholders who run higher balances may be targeted under the guise of a "periodic review". In response to this development, Innovative Wealth Builders has spent much of 2010 assisting consumers that find themselves under attack by the large banks. Millions of credit card holders may be impacted and Innovative Wealth Builders reports that many are not even aware that a company such as Innovative Wealth Builders is available to provide assistance.

Innovative Wealth Builders offers an approach that allows consumers to methodically respond to these threats rather than simply reacting out of emotion. With veteran counselors and senior management, Innovative Wealth Builders has encountered similar situations before and states that there are absolute solutions. "Subtle intimidation and the use of arbitrary criteria are simply bank maneuvers to increase profits and engorge themselves," recently stated Tammy Johnson, CEO of Innovative Wealth Builders.

Innovative Wealth Builders explains to clients the arbitrary nature of these approaches. While most credit card holders understand little about why this is happening, Innovative Wealth Builders offers a reason. Credit grantors utilize what they refer to as "risk-based pricing" where people are basically penalized due to a downward movement of their overall credit score, even if their payments are timely and current.

Innovative Wealth Builders believes that these increases are unjustified and in response they are arming their clients with proven approaches that can, in some cases, cut interest rates by as much as half. Just because a bank has mismanaged its assets and finds itself with losses instead of profits should not justify these attacks on hard working Americans. Indeed, Innovative Wealth Builders has seen more clients this year than any since its inception. The economy has hit working people hard and it seems to Innovative Wealth Builders that people are now being kicked while they are down.

While banks are making it easy to refuse these interest rate increases, it requires paying off the balances and no longer using the card. That is simply not the only option and Innovative Wealth Builders knows it. If these banks are on unstable ground then they should not expect working people to bail them out. Innovative Wealth Builders counsels clients to resist such bullying. Innovative Wealth Builders is a fee based solution provider that offers a suite of services for people that are working at finding a balance between fulfilling obligations, reducing the monthly stress of payments and planning for the future.
