The Most Powerful Documentation You Can Submit With Your Application For Modification

The bank modified our loan about a year ago but we were given some very difficult terms. We found ourselves behind again and close to foreclosure. With your help we were able to get another modification, but this time our monthly payment went down over $700 and our interest rate was cut in half. The results were a blessing that saved our home. With such a huge potential to improve your mortgage terms, I would say to anyone- "Don't try to deal with a mortgage company alone."

We really wanted to thank you for your help in saving our home and getting a payment that we can afford. We appreciate how helpful and easy you were to talk to. Thank you for sticking it out to the end and not giving up on us. If anyone were to ask about your company I would tell them you do what you say you will do and help them anyway you can.

I was behind on payments and facing foreclosure. I couldn't refinance and didn't know where to turn for help. It gave me peace of mind knowing I had someone on my side who was willing to help me keep my home. I got a lower payment I could afford and a lower interest rate. Now that I can pay my mortgage every month on time I am no longer stressed about losing my home.

That Has Already Been Filed Against Your Mortgage Lender

Political irresponsibility, and unprecedented manipulation of the mortgage on your home to make unstable financial products created a house of cards that came crashing down in 2008. It was this financial collapse that took down the real estate market and the economy with it, making it difficult if not impossible for millions of homeowners to make their mortgage payment.

After this crash, the banks received billions of dollars in bailout money from the federal government to keep them afloat until they could right their ship. Very little of this money has been used to help homeowners who are losing their homes in record numbers. And assistance in the way of modifications or other workouts have been painfully slow and hard to get.

In America, we have the right to seek redress through the courts if we feel we have been wronged. And most of us will try to settle differences through some kind of negotiation first. But after a person has tried every other avenue to request, workout, or negotiate some kind of help or consideration regarding that wrong without success, a lawsuit becomes the only option left.

Decisions are starting to come down now in favor of homeowners in a case that has been going for 18 months against Bank of America. This has paved the way for similar lawsuits to now be initiated against every other major lender.

You can join one of these lawsuits as a plaintiff for a fraction of the cost of hiring an attorney yourself for this kind of case. It's called a 'mass joinder' lawsuit and the damages sought in your behalf are nothing less than a full lien strip or in other words a free and clear house if the bank can't produce the documents that show they own the note on your home. Or at the very least, damages could be awarded that would reduce the principal balance of the note on your home to 80% of market value, and give you a 2% interest rate for the life of the loan.

Does the bank have the right to foreclose on your house if you don't pay the mortgage? Of course they do.

Do you have the right to sue a financial establishment for malfeasance and misdealings if their actions are what made it impossible for you to pay your mortgage?

"You can stand up for yourself and what is right, and take action to hold the responsible institutions accountable for their actions."

DISCLAIMER:

While decisions that support homeowners are starting to come in a case that has been ongoing for several months against Bank of America, you should be acutely aware that a lawsuit doesn't guarantee any particular outcome, including any guarantee of award, keeping your house out of foreclosure, or that the case will not be dismissed. You should study the merits of the case and educate yourself fully in regard to the risk of paying an attorney a retainer to pursue litigation against any party or entity and then make an informed decision regarding your involvement in that particular case.
