Industry Tips

Government Grant Services

In our experience companies placing government grant ads have no affiliation with the government, but rather, are third parties offering information that can often be obtained for free from government agencies. Customers should keep in mind that government grants are not designed to provide a means to pay bills or have extra spending money. Generally, obtaining a grant is a complicated process requiring documentation and research, and are primarily for education and business purposes. Although private, non-profit foundations may exist whose requirements are based on personal preference, the vast majority require applicants to meet very specific guidelines to qualify.
