Bert Oliver's Summary

How did I become a "dirt" (real estate) lawyer? Well, when I joined the Army someone with a relatively low IQ and wearing a gun, looked at his clipboard and said, "You are a cook." My first thought was to raise a serious objection, but one look at that face and the gun prompted me to smile and say, "Yes Sir!" Sometime thereafter I walked into a New York, Park Avenue law firm and a gentleman with a very high IQ and signed paychecks looked at his clipboard and said, "You are in the Real Estate Department." I was again tempted to object, but one look at that face and the checkbook and I said, "Yes Sir!" Something about guns and checkbooks and knowing when to keep one's thoughts to oneself. Forty years later, I am still a cook and a dirt lawyer.

Three years after meeting Mr. Park Avenue Checkbook, my phone rings and a voice says, "Hi. I'm Mel Greenberg. I am building the largest law firm in Florida. I am recruiting you." One minute I am telling him he has a wrong number; the next I am agreeing to go to Miami on a recruiting trip. Credit that to the man's ability to charm; even on a long distance phone call. When I first met Mel, proudly told him that I made $19K/year. He offered me $50K on the spot. We shook hands and one week later I was in Miami / South Florida to stay.

Now I have the opportunity to put together a group of friends and great lawyers - Jerry Gritter (Corporate/Securities law), Luke Sherlock (Bankruptcy and Debt Forgiveness Negotiation) and John L. Papera (Real Estate) and form a new firm - The Oliver Law Group, P.A. The new Firm has affiliated with lawyers in several states on a Co-Counsel basis in the area of Debt Forgiveness helping individuals and families with real hardships negotiate out from under the crushing burden of unsecured debt or, where appropriate, referring them to competent bankruptcy counsel.

Bert Oliver's Specialties:

Complex real estate transactions with lots of long documents and long words and seemingly unsurmountable issues to resolve.
